In the new generation of games, the player always wishes to be independent, different, unique, and famous. However, before the game starts, the game player can make a choice, "What do I wish?". The player himself will be the main character and become Vivid Knight. "Vivid Knight" is a mixture of RPG, Tower Defense, and Roguelike. The player can build his own castle, generate a hero, and fight against monsters. Features of Vivid Knight:

- RPG: Select the hero according to their ability and rank, and improve their rank.
- Tower Defense: Increase the defense power to stop monsters.
- Roguelike: Choose the difficulty of the game according to the player's ability to determine the difficulty level.
- Custom Castle: Custom the player's castle.
- Expandable: Expand player's castle.
- Rewards: Complete the adventure to get rewards.
- Adventure: Hone the skills and increase your level.
- Conquest: The mission is to win the mission and move on.

The game is live on this weekend on App store and Amazon in the US, App store in UK and Europe and Google play store. The game is free. To finish the quest, you need to spend the 15 ish bits. I did spend a bit more than that to get the right picture and video. I will continue to release video clip from time to time after the game goes live.

UPDATE: For those who have been asking for the blog post. I've put up the actual release notes from the game this Friday. The issues or confusion that people are having with certain things will be in it. No more screenshots of the castle/adventure because I've put that on here already. The image on the screenshots is the last one I took of the castle and adventure. Plus I did not have time to take more than that. I'll be posting regularly the same on here that I've been posting on my facebook page.

Q: How to handle overlapped GPIO signals? i am wondering how to handle overlapped GPIO signals? Currently i am using GPIO to write a python script (AKA scripting to play music) which, on the ell of the song, will trigger both to turn off HDMI output, sleep (Linux Mint Cinnamon) and turn back on HDMI. This works because the GPIO signals never overlap (although I know probably isn't ideal... for more info see 'Groups of digital outputs') - will this be a problem if the Raspberry Pi tries to sleep whilst the HDMI output is high, or would the Pi just either turn off the HDMI or sleep? My assumption is that it would just just turn off the HDMI whilst sleeping, or shut the HDMI ports off. However could I be mistaken? A:

In a world that is an echo of the past, there is a band of people called the Dark Warriors who have the power to wield a chain known as the Shadow, which can chain the users together and unleash their destructive potential. The power of the chain has been stripped from its masters, and the Darkness now flows freely through the land to the point where most things are infused with the power of darkness. In this world, the Darkness is a living entity that rushes through the veins of the Dark Warriors, and once unleashed, the chain becomes a shadow that can be cast anywhere and absorb any level of darkness. They are able to transform into shadowform and then, by the touch of the chain, they can also transform back to their humanoid form. As the Darkness floods across the land, the number of Dark Warriors is steadily decreasing, and there is a rumour of a prophecy being uttered by a madman. As one Dark Warrior, you must go into the lands ravaged by the Darkness and use your power to defeat the Darkness and heal the land. The character designs for the Dark Warriors are based on Final Fantasy IX. Recommended for you Please reload

No detailed specification available on it yet. We are waiting for the company's official press release. Listed price is for reference. (price can be edited after actual release time). Please add us on your favorites for future reference.As a catalyst for the polymerization of olefins, e.g., ethylene, propylene, 1-butene, 1-pentene, 4-methyl-1-pentene, 1-hexene, 4-methyl-1-hexene, and the like, metallocene and non-metallocene transition metal catalysts are known. For olefin polymerization, metallocene and non-metallocene transition metal catalysts are used separately. For example, the patent document 1 discloses a method of producing a film using a mixture of a non-metallocene transition metal catalyst and metallocene catalyst. The patent document 2 discloses a polymerization method of a copolymer of ethylene and one or more alpha-olefins using metallocene and non-metallocene transition metal catalysts, alone or in combination. Further, a process for efficiently polymerizing ethylene in a liquid phase has been proposed (the patent document 3). As a result of recent research on catalyst activity, it has been revealed that solubility of an organic aluminum compound into a catalyst component as well as the addition of a specific titanium compound when a catalyst is formed is an important factor to enhance activity. Further, it has been discovered that an ethylene polymer with narrow molecular weight distribution is obtained by using a catalyst with a syndiospecificity. From these findings, it has become clear that a polymerization process controlled by a combination of a catalytic component composed of a metallocene catalyst component and an organoaluminum compound with a titanium component is an effective way to achieve high activity and yield in producing a polyolefin. However, when a crystalline ethylene-olefin copolymer is produced using such a catalyst, extruder fouling caused by the entanglement of polymer particles during extrusion becomes a problem. In addition, migration of an active catalyst into the other structure components such as the die decreases the mechanical properties. As a result, an improved catalyst is desired such as a catalyst with decreased crystallinity, and a method producing an ethylene-olefin copolymer having uniform composition distribution by using the catalyst. As a
